A COAST PORT

Honolulu from the standpoint of the United States shipping laws is not a by a crew originate in Oriental or Australian ports. This decision has been reached after investigation by the Bureau of Navigation on account of the claim advanced by seamen that upon arrival here from an Oriental or Australian port they are entitled to discharge and pay.

It has been the endeavor to make it seem that Honolulu is a port of the Paago by the Supreme Court stated that it was the intention of the law to place Honolulu as a port of the Pacific but it seems from a ruling made by theOCTOBER 7 Bureau of Navigation that articles areOCTOBER 13 drawn in such a vague way that Ho-.....OCTOBER 28 nolulu is not to be considered a port ofNOVEMBER 3 the Pacific coast, and that masters ofNOVEMBER 18 vessels are requested to have articles drawn more definitely so that seamen shipping in trans-Pacific ports will not mistake the tenure of the voyage they are to undertake.

It appears that seamen's wages beetween Honolulu and the Coast they are much lower. Seamen on reaching Mohican, Am. bk., Kelley, San Fran-Honolulu generally find this out and make a demand for discharge claiming Honolulu to be a Pacific coast port, and therefore the end of their voyage, as if they had reached the Sound or San Francisco.

WILL TAKE NEW SUIT OF SAILS

The four-masted schooner Kona arrived yesterday from Honoipu, en route to the Nitrate ports of South America. She anchored outside and will take on a new suit of sails which have just been completed here. The vessel will depart for the South in two or three

To Bell for Old Junk.

The announcement that the White Star Line steamship Brittanic is now on its last voyage marks the passing of one of the most famous Atlantic steamships. She has just sailed from Belfast for Bremen, having been sold to a firm to be broken up.

The Brittanic was built in 1874, and soon after being built reduced the time between Queenstown and Sandy Hook to less than eight days. She established a record for the eastward voyage of seven days sixteen hours. The Brittanic was considered a won-but for size and luxury. She has used the engines and boilers which were put into her when she was built, never missing a day through accident or disability. The Brittanic made better time after years of continuous service than when first put in service, making her 318th trip in September, 1890, in seven days, six hours and fifty-five minutes, breaking her previous record, made in 1888. of seven days, nine hours and thirty minutes, afterward crossing in seven days, six hours and fifty-two minutes. Her best westward record was made in August, 1896, seven days, seven hours and thirty minutes. Twentynine years of service under her original engines and boilers is a record not likely to be approached by ocean steamships for years to come.

The Brittanic between 1874 and 1899 made some 260 voyages between New York and Liverpool, crossing the Atlantic more than 500 times. She traveled about 1,800,000 miles, or enough to take her more than seventy times around the world, and carried more than 200,000 passengers.

When the British-Boer war broke out n 1899 the British government claimed the Brittanic for use as a transport. In 1900 she was selected to convey the imperial corps, which escorted the Prince of Wales on his tour of the colonies, making the trip of 29,000 miles. This was the end of her military service, and since then she has been lying at Belfast.

The Maui brought with her 4000 bags sugar, 122 bags corn, 29 bags potatoes, 55 bags beans, 16 hogs, 77 pkgs. sundries. The American-Hawaiian company's freighter Nevadan is scheduled to arrive from the coast this morning. She has two days' mail,
